Caraval

Stephanie Garber is an American author, she was a college resident director when she started writing in her freetime. She wrote several novels and received many rejections. Caraval eventually brought her success, earning a starred review from Publishers Weekly, which said "intriguing characters, an imaginative setting, and evocative writing combine to create a spellbinding tale of love, loss, sacrifice, and hope". Caraval spent fifteen weeks on The New York Times bestseller list, reaching number 2. And Legendary, the book's second volume, was on The New York Times bestseller list for eight weeks.

Film rights to Caraval were optioned by Twentieth Century Fox.

Scarlett has never left the tiny island where she and her beloved sister, Tella, live with their powerful, and cruel, father. Now Scarlett's father has arranged a marriage for her, and Scarlett thinks her dreams of seeing Caraval, the far-away, once-a-year performance where the audience participates in the show, are over. But this year, Scarlett's long-dreamt of invitation finally arrives. With the help of a mysterious sailor, Tella whisks

Scarlett away to the show. Only, as soon as they arrive, Tella is kidnapped by Caraval's mastermind organizer, Legend. It turns out that this season's Caraval revolves around Tella, and whoever finds her first is the winner.

Scarlett has been told that everything that happens during Caraval is only an elaborate performance. But she nevertheless becomes enmeshed in a game of love, heartbreak, and magic with the other players in the game. And whether Caraval is real or not, she must find Tella before the five nights of the game are over, a dangerous domino effect of consequences is set off, and her sister disappears forever.

The first picture shows the Caraval's symbol, the circle, the sun and a drop of rain in it. It appears in many places in the story, but the symbol has no special meaning, it only shows when something is related to the Caraval. The second picture shows the opening pages of the second book of the trilogy, with the map of Caraval. The third picture shows a fan-edited composition, the badge reads Caraval's famous phrase "Remember, it's only a game!". The fourth picture shows the main character's Caraval ticket. In the fifth and last picture, you can see the books in their wonderful appearance. The sixth image shows a fan edit of Caraval's master, Legend. In all representations, Legend appears faceless, as no one knows his true identity. And on the seventh picture you can read a funny caption ("come back yesterday"), there are many sentences like this in the books, since the time in the book is different, why wouldn't it be possible to go back to yesterday? Also, the means of payment in the book are also interesting, since there is no mention of money in the story, for some things you want to buy you have to pay with your latest lie, your most feared secret or even 2 days of your life.

Although Twentieth Century Fox received the rights to the films in 2017, we still don't know anything about the preparations. So let's take a look at a fan-made trailer that, in my opinion, perfectly portrays the impressive world of Caraval. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=j885QQhcqRU>

BUNK'D

Peyton List as Emma Ross; Karan Brar as Ravi Ross; Skai Jackson as Zuri Ross; Kevin G. Quinn as Xander; Nina Lu as Tiffany; Miranda May as Lou; Nathan Arenas as Jorge; Tessa Netting as Hazel; Mary Scheer as Gladys; Mallory James Mahoney as Destiny Baker; Raphael Alejandro as Matteo Silva; Will Buie Jr. as Finn Sawyer

TV SERIES REVIEW

Bunk'd, a spinoff of Disney's successful (and marginally better) sitcom Jessie, plucks three of the four Ross siblings—pretty and popular Emma; geeky, giant lizard-owning Ravi; and the precociously cute Zuri—and plops them down at Camp Kikiwaka, a very camp-like camp set in the wilds of Maine.

It was a natural destination, really, given that their parents met and fell in love there as counselors. Indeed, the camp still reverberates with their magical time, and counselors still speak in hushed tones about the future Mrs. Ross' fabled skills: "Her dream catchers actually caught dreams," gushes current counselor Lou. So it's clear that Emma, Ravi and Zuri—the latter two officially "counselors-in-training"—must quickly learn to embrace their family's proud Kikiwaka heritage.

But, alas, Kikiwaka isn't all just hot dogs and s'mores. Gladys, the camp's adult Grand Poobah, has never gotten over her own crush on Mr. Ross and therefore harbors a deep grudge against the kids' mother. And because camp is weird that way, the cycle seems to be repeating itself: Head counselor Hazel—Gladys' daughter—has a thing for hunky, guitar-playing counselor Xander, but he's far more interested in Emma. Nuts, says Hazel, and makes it her mission to weasel in between the two aspiring lovebirds.

All of that—and the presence of the mysterious Kikiwaka monster—is just the minimalist backdrop for yet another joke-rinse-and-repeat Disney sitcom.

TIME TO UNPACK

Disney, as much as fans may appreciate Frozen or a ride on the Matterhorn, hasn't made a truly funny sitcom for years now. But Disney has excelled in concocting (largely) inoffensive, (mostly) clean comedies that the whole family can (kinda) enjoy. Most come stocked with at least one strong adult role model, a smattering of well-meaning kids and maybe a moral or two.

And on Bunk'd? Well, Gladys, the show's silly stand-in for an adult, is an embittered crab of a woman, and her mean-girl daughter's well on her way to being just like her. The show sporadically lauds rule-breaking and authority-flaunting. There's a gross reliance on potty humor for a wan attempt at laughs, and the morals we see are the sorts that we might expect from National Lampoon: lighten up, have a little fun, don't let that evil counselor get you down. At almost feels like the Mouse House's sitcom pitch meeting was mysteriously overrun by Garbage Pail Kids.
